I'm using a Ham radio and my time is rather limited. I currently use an ALFA G3RX radio. I just upgraded to a dual band YL03-A/EHL9R (87-9.3 MHz and 9.95-13.15 MHz). My old radio works in the 87 MHz band and the new radio won't work in the 9.95 MHz band. The Ham radio I use only has dual band capability. I've attached the "air antenna" to the new radio and used the same antenna on my old radio. I could not use an adapter. If I connect the amplifier in the right side of the new 09e8f5149f

Q: Importing values from the database I am currently trying to create a program where i need to enter two predefined values from the database. However i'm not being able to do this: `$stmt = $conn->prepare("SELECT response, received FROM sms WHERE message = '$message' "); $stmt->execute(); $stmt->fetch(PDO::FETCH_ASSOC); $message = $stmt->row['received'];` I am also trying to use this solution Now, because i'm using a XAMPP server, and i can't seem to be able to use `bind_param()` function. I'm not sure if the solution that i posted is even possible for PDO.

A: You can do: `$sql = "SELECT response, received FROM sms WHERE message = '$message'"; $stmt = $conn->prepare($sql); $stmt->execute(); $result = $stmt->fetch(PDO::FETCH_ASSOC); $message = $result['received'];` If you want to add a parameter: `$sql = "SELECT response, received FROM sms WHERE message =?"; $stmt = $conn->prepare($sql); $stmt->execute(array($message)); $result = $stmt->fetch(PDO::FETCH_ASSOC); $message = $result['received'];` In either case you then have to check to see if you succeeded. PDO will return false on an error, but you can check if that is the case. PDO also allows you to bind a parameter as a string. So you can still bind: `$sql`
